

HAPPY INDEPENDENCE DAY

We hope you enjoy your Fourth of July Holiday. Plans for BBQs, water play, and fireworks shows are certainly being made all across America. While we all realize that July 4th signifies hot dogs, hamburgers, and sparklers, we are also taking the time to celebrate the adoption of the Declaration of Independence by the Continental Congress on July 4th, 1776. The document, drafted by Thomas Jefferson, was not only created to declare our freedom, but also to express values important to our new nation.

"That all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness." These famous words are pillars in the foundation of America's identity and are what we celebrate each Fourth of July. They make us proud of our American history and culture.

Of course, there is more to the Declaration of Independence than its most famous lines and more to its celebration as a piece of American history. It also signifies the decision of the Founding Fathers to formally cut ties with King George the Third and Britain. The Declaration of Independence is, in fact, also a letter of resignation so to speak, between a colony and it's king.

While the gravity of the words placed in The Declaration of Independence should not be trivialized, it is interesting to think of this solemn document from a different perspective. We can all relate, personally, when we think of relationships that have become too tense, are no longer mutually beneficial, and the potential messiness of these dis-entanglements. In the case of your legal practice, we at Northstar Legal, Inc. want to protect you from mismatched employer/employee relationships. We will ensure that the values that are important to you are identified and found in individuals working for you and do our part to lighten your load in your own pursuit of happiness.

A Note From the Editor

At the center of your being you have the answer. You know who you are and what you want.~Lao Tzu

At the center of this year, I find my self confident in where I am and where I am headed with NorthStar Legal. I look forward to my fall and winter years with this wonderful company, and the relationships I have yet to form.
